“In Portland, about 200 people clad in black marched to the local Democratic headquarters, where some of them smashed windows and tipped over garbage containers, lighting the contents of one on fire,” The New York Times reported. Of course, the Times and other left-wing outlets still couldn’t resist framing the extremists as “protesters” and highlighting their grievances over alleged “racial injustice, economic inequality, federal law enforcement, and corporate power.” When it came to the right-wing extremists who stormed the U.S. Capitol earlier this month, their grievances were not given such flattering treatment.

There was a certain irony to it.

As noted in a tweet by well-known Trump supporter Kambree Kawahine Koa, Americans were “told for a week Trump supporters were going to incite violence in all 50 states and DC needed 10 million soldiers.”

Yet “here we are watching liberals flip cars, light ‘em on fire, bust windows in Seattle and Oregon.”

Indeed.

The remark about “watching liberals flip cars” was in reference to something else that occurred in Portland: Apparently, a car containing a family flipped on its side while making a turn. Medical authorities try to rush in to assist but were delayed by a crowd of extremists
